An expert reviewer, one of our editors, or contributing editor writes a first draft

First draft is edited by the Editor in Chief and sent to reviewers* for comments and corrections

New draft is prepared by a Medical Letter editor together with the Editor in Chief, taking into account reviewers’ possible conflicts of interest

Complete editorial review for:
- Accuracy
- Completeness
- Scientific Rigor
- Objectivity

Further revisions by editors, Editor in Chief, and President

Review by Editor in Chief

Final revisions

The final article is printed and mailed to subscribers

* Contributing editors, selected experts by specialty, first authors of cited articles, FDA, CDC

Editorial Staff

The Medical Letter®
Essential to your practice
www.medicalletter.org